December 2000

192d Fighter Wing deploys to Curaçao

The 192d Fighter Wing has headed south to the tiny Island of Curaçao for the unit's first Aerospace Expeditionary Force deployment. The island — part of the Netherlands Antilles — is one of three islands about 70 miles off the northeastern coast of South America. The Advance Team took off the Wednesday after Thanksgiving and the rest of the contingent flies down Dec. 1.

The December-long deployment has been divided into two with nearly 60 Wing members going for each half of the month.

The deployment package includes aircraft, pilots, operations staff, aircraft maintenance members and a small number of support personnel. Lt.Col. Pete Bonanni, 192d Operations Group commander, serves as detachment commander for the first half of the deployment, and Wing Commander Col. Steve Hicks takes over for the last half of the deployment.

While in Curaçao the Wing's aircraft and personnel will be assigned to Operation Nighthawk; they'll stay on alert, fly counterdrug missions over the Caribbean, and tackle some flying training requirements.

During December and continuing through February 2001, the Wing is also sending individuals and small groups to several locations around the world in support of other AEF missions. Wing personnel are heading to Turkey to support Northern Watch and to Germany, France, and Saudi Arabia & Kuwait in support of on-going U.S. expeditionary force missions.

Va. National Guard gains unit

Joint Forces augmentation unit stands up

The Virginia National Guard grew one unit larger on Nov. 18. At 11 a.m. in the auditorium at the Armed Forces Staff College on Norfolk Naval Base, the Joint National Guard Augmentation Unit stood up.

The mission of the newly activated unit is to augment the mission of the U.S. Joint Forces Command. Specifically, the new unit will assist Joint Forces Command in developing joint doctrine and training. JFC is headquartered at Norfolk Naval Base and is commanded by a four-star general.

Commanding the Joint NG Augmentation Unit is the Virginia Air Guard's own Colonel Robert Newman (formerly with the 192d Fighter Wing and most recently the VaANG State Headquarters). The unit currently has 50 National Guard positions assigned:

40 Army Guard and 10 Air Guard. Members of both the Virginia and North Carolina National Guard are filling the positions.

The new unit met about 50 percent of its staffing needs by August and is continuing to recruit, according to Colonel Newman. "It is vital that we put outstanding, hardworking individuals into these positions," Newman said. "A high level of performance will be expected from the unit. It will be demanding work, but it is also a great way to gather joint experience. This is the way the U.S. will fight in the future — not just interservice, but also on a multinational level with our NATO partners."

The unit will use Joint Vision 2020 as a focal point in JFC doctrine development. "We must understand the shape and character of the enemy, become better at using information and technology to improve our information warfare and fighting capabilities, learn to strike more quickly and become more stealthy," Newman explained.

The unit's current vacancies include a couple slots for master and senior master sergeants (E-6-E-8) and a few openings for major through colonel (O-4-O-6). For more information about these vacancies, contact CMSgt. Vickie Armes, ext. 6462.

Happy Holidays!

Thank you for great year; wish you the best in 2001!

The holiday season is upon us, and 2000 is nearly at its end. This time of year gives us the opportunity for personal reflection, giving thanks and celebrating! I hope you will take time during the next month to reflect upon the meaning of this special time of year, and to give thanks for the many things we take for granted as U.S. citizens.

We enjoy a peace in this nation that is unheard of in many other countries. During this holiday season please keep in mind our fellow unit members who are deployed to Curaçao, Southwest Asia and so many other locations around the globe. Many of our fellow soldiers and airmen are doing very important work to make the world a safer place to live. And many of them won't get the chance to be home for the holidays. They are performing their duties honorably and professionally in remote corners of the world. They are sacrificing their comfort, happiness, and even their lives to bring peace to other people.

Take time to celebrate the holidays with your loved ones. The Virginia Air National Guard couldn't exist without the support of our wives, husbands, children, parents, neighbors, bosses and co-workers. Keep 1999 -- The ANG Year of the Family -- alive next year and every year. Let your family and friends know that you recognize and appreciate the sacrifices they make that allow you to pursue your military career. The holidays are a great time for thanking these very special people.

Take pride in being a member of the Virginia Air National Guard and the U.S. military. We are a unique group of individuals -- with a wonderful legacy we learned so much about while preparing for the 352d Fighter Group reunion. We bring our history, strengths, skills and patriotism together to create a team capable of serving our nation and state.

The Air National Guard has been called upon to do much over the last 50 years. And, with our first Expeditionary Aerospace Force deployment underway, we can expect our duties to expand even more in the coming years. We must work hard to stay current with our active duty counterparts -- modern equipment, highly trained people and vital mission capabilities. These will be our challenges in the coming years.

This year was busy, with the 352d Fighter Group Reunion and Unit Compliance Inspection. Next year will be busy with deployments and preparation for the Wing's next Operational Readiness Inspection, but remember to take time out to reflect, give thanks, and celebrate all that we have.

During this holiday season my family and I wish you and yours "Peace on earth and good will toward all." Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

Col. Stephen R. Hicks

Moment of Reflection

A story is told of a World War II GI in France a few weeks after the invasion at Normandy. He was walking down a ravaged street and noticed among all the destruction the children of war. Children who were now parentless and hungry. At the end of the road he could take it no longer. He picked up a little boy and carried him to the only shop still operating. He took the boy in and told him to order anything on the menu. The surprised boy didn't say a word, but simply pointed to something on the menu.

After eating all that he could the little boy turned to the Army soldier and asked him a question. He asked, "Are you Jesus Christ?" Little things do matter in this life. You might not think that the little things you do get noticed, but they do — especially by God. His Word says, "for I was hungry and you gave Me food; I was thirsty and you gave Me drink; I was a stranger and you took Me in...(Matthew 25:35).

As you go through the routines of life, especially during the upcoming holiday season, why not search out a few ways to share kindness and compassion? Small things done with great love change the world. In other words, Why Not be Jesus Christ to someone today?

Giving: Best part of holidays!

The First Sergeants' Council is sponsoring a holiday food drive for the needy. You will notice decorated boxes around the base. The council is seeking donations of canned goods and non-perishable items only. The food drive will run through noon Sunday of the December UTA.

They are also sponsoring a "Fill a Christmas stocking for a child" project. Get in on this fun and worthwhile event. If you've picked up a stocking, please put it in a food collection box by noon Sunday. The stockings will be presented to the Salvation Army for distribution to needy children in the Richmond area. Visit the Public Affairs office if you would like ideas or to see a stocking that has been completed.

Logistics personnel are planning a holiday trip to the Veterans Hospital in Richmond on Saturday, Dec. 2. They will leave in a bus, from in front of Supply at 8:30 a.m. that day.

Cash donations to help offset the cost of fruit for the veterans will be accepted by Lt.Col. Gary Wood or TSgt. Smith. Guard family members are invited to accompany their Guard sponsor on this visit.

192d FW man earns 'distinguished' marksman title

TSgt. Cash follows in father's footsteps

Shooting his pistol has always been a favorite pastime for TSgt. Krag-Stevens Cash of the 192d Logistic Group's Maintenance Squadron. And he hardly ever misses his mark! Proof of his expertise was demonstrated recently when Cash won the Spatz Trophy as the top Air Force competitor at the National Rifle Association's National Championships held at Camp Perry, Ohio in July.

That's not a feat won easily. Cash competed against nearly 30 marksmen & women during two separate tournaments to collect enough points for the Spatz Trophy. The sergeant used 45-caliber Colt in the President's 100 competition and again in the Excellence in Competition match to capture the award.

Besides winning the Spatz, Cash's team also won the national match pistol competition and the Centerfire match competition. Cash was part of the All Guard Team during these contests. More than 800 military and civilian competitors participated in the tournaments.

Cash also boasts another record of sorts. He is only the third person in the history of the VaANG to earn the title 'distinguished' with a service pistol. This is especially noteworthy when you consider the first person to receive this distinction was Cash's father, retired CMSgt. Robert K. Cash. CMSgt. Ray Bassetti, VaANG StHq Command CMSgt., was the second recipient. "My father was very inspirational in my decision to compete in rifle competitions," Cash said.

His win at Camp Perry this year marks the eighth year he's competed at a national level competition with this year marking his first year to win an individual honor at this level of event. But, he's still no stranger to winning. The Waynesboro, Va., native's previous winnings include the Browning High Power Match (45-caliber) and the Uzi (machine gun) competition in Belgium. In 1999, he was also a member of the winning Three Gun competition at the interservice championships.

The 16-year VaANG veteran practices shooting on average three days per week. He can be found practicing at home, on base, or on 22 acres he has access to in New Kent. Various exercises held throughout the year and around the world also help keep his sharp shooter skills honed, according to the man. He plans to continue competing next year with hopes to make the All Guard team again. "A dream of mine has always been to compete at the Olympic level," he admitted.

Cash made sure to note that he gets a lot of support from his wife, Calvin Ann and his daughter Lisa Renee. He also juggles his civilian job responsibilities as an international shipping coordinator for AMF Bakery Systems in Richmond and a few hobbies such as hunting and fishing. "There's more to practice than just shooting. There's also a lot of mental practice and discipline involved too," he explained.

The 192d Fighter Wing's Marksmanship Team is always looking for interested VaANG members to join their team, according to the sergeant. "We get great base-wide support. We can always use a little more help, and we appreciate the many people who've shown interest in the team," he ended.

Anyone interested in finding out more about the team may contact CMSgt. Ray Bassetti at extension 6510.

Don't suffer with flu; avoid catching it

No word yet on the arrival of the VaANG's allotment of flu vaccine. The 1st Medical Group at Langley AFB suggests taking the following steps to lessen your chances of catching the flu:

--- Keep your fingers away from your eyes, nose and mouth.

--- Wash your hands frequently with soap and warm water.

--- Stay well hydrated. Drink plenty of water and healthy fruit juices.

--- Exercising regularly to boost your immune system.

CMSgt. Bradley retires after 35 years

After 35 years of faithful, professional service to the Virginia Air National Guard, CMSgt. Donald Bradley retired November 30, 2000. The base Supply Chief was frequently cited as an outstanding individual and a dedicated, hardworking member of the Logistics Squadron.

Additionally, Chief Bradley served four years of active duty service. He began his Guard career here on Nov. 27, 1965, with a stint in Munitions Supply before moving to Base Supply a short time later. He developed a wealth of knowledge about the supply business as he worked in various sections of Base Supply. At varying times, he held the position of Supervisor of the Material Management Flight, Operations Support Flight, and Management and Systems Flight before finally achieving the highest enlisted position in Base Supply. He was also a key player in the unit's mobility function and exercise program.

Chief Bradley was a core member of the Chiefs' Council, and he continuously promoted improvements for the VaANG, the Wing, his unit and for all enlisted personnel.

The Chief was extremely dedicated to his job, the base customers and to the VaANG. You always knew that when he gave the answer to a supply question or problem, it had been well researched. He was often quoted as saying "LITB --Look in the Book" because he wanted to ensure that his research or the understanding of others was accurate and the job was done right. He contributed immeasurably to the success of the Logistics Squadron throughout the years.

Chief Bradley is married to Fran Bradley and has two children (daughter Tricia, and son, Kevin) and two grandchildren. His son, SSgt Kevin Bradley, followed his father into the VaANG and also works in Base Supply as does the Chief's brother, MSgt Gary Bradley. Several other relatives are also current or past members of the unit. Chief Bradley's promotion and support of the VaANG played a major role in many of his family members' decisions to join the unit.

Chief Bradley's sense of professional dedication and strong work ethic extend across both his professional and personal lives. He is an active member of his church in New Kent. Our hats off to Chief Bradley for a very successful career and our sincerest thanks for a job extremely well done!

*Sincerely,
The 192d Logistics Family*

OSD mandates new Information Assurance training

VaANG members need training by Dec. 31

The Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) recently mandated new Information Assurance (IA) computer based training (CBT) for all members of the Department of Defense. All VaANG personnel must complete this training requirement by Dec. 31, 2000, explains MSgt. Hutt Williams, Base Information Assurance Manager.

In addition to the "Computer Use" training everyone must receive, Systems Administrators (SA) and Workgroup Managers (WM) must complete additional training. SA/WM personnel must take the Systems Administrator (SYS Admin) CBT by Dec. 31.

The IA CBT has 6 modules and exams, but LAN (VaANG local area network) users are currently required to take only Module Two: "Computer Use." Systems Administrators and Workgroup Managers must also complete the SYS Admin CBT. Completion of the INFOCON CBT is not yet required.

This new computer-based training must be accomplished no later than Dec. 31 regardless of when any previous IA CBT training was completed. Failure to complete Module Two by Dec. 31 will result in suspension of your LAN access.

Before the IA CBT training can be started, users must register at <https://afcbt.den.disa.mil/usafcbt/default.htm> from a .mil domain computer. It is suggested that during the December drill, you complete the IA CBT that has been placed on the VaANG LAN. However, once registered from a .mil domain, you may access the many other computer based training courses that are available, from a home computer. All LAN users must register at the above web page in order to get credit for this new OSD mandate. When the IA CBT is completed on the VaANG LAN, scores are exported back to the AFCBT web site and are tracked by the HQ Air Force

Communications Agency (AFCA) at Scott AFB, Ill. No credit will be given for tests taken if the user is not registered prior to taking the training. The VaANG has no control over the tracking procedures. HQ AFCA and ANG are the controlling agencies, and they will generate rosters of units out of compliance.

The following are facts concerning the new IA CBT:

1. You must first register at the AFCBT web site mentioned above. IA CBT registration help information can be found on the LAN under (make the following selections) Network Applications, Training, SATE Training, and SATE Registration Help Information. Once the user is registered, the IA CBT can be completed using the VaANG network. (Be sure to write down the student number given to you on the AFCBT registration screen; you'll need it for the next step.)
2. The IA CBT is located on the LAN under (make the following selections) Network Applications, Training, SATE Training, and New SATE Training. Enter "self" on the Users Detail screen to initially launch the IA CBT. The next screen asks for a

Name and Number. This is the student number from the AFCBT registration screen. Enter the student number instead of "self" for later CBT sessions.

3. Remember, only the Computer Use Module of the IA CBT must be completed by the Dec. 31 deadline, but beginning in February 2001, all modules will have to be completed. (More information on these requirements will be published in the coming months.)

4. A minimum score of 70% is passing for each IA CBT module.

5. Training progress can be viewed at the above web site approximately 3-5 days after module completion.

6. All new LAN users (VaANG members who don't yet have computer accounts) must see unit SATE manager to complete this training requirement, or come to the Communications Flight to complete it in paper format. You won't be given a LAN account until you've completed Module Two.

7. Mass IA instruction briefings/testings are permitted. If your unit wishes to conduct a mass briefing/

What to do when faced with inclement weather before UTA

If the region has inclement weather and it becomes necessary to close the base or have an adjusted reporting time, the base will publicize that information as quickly as possible via as many avenues as possible, according to Lt.Col. Ralph Barker, 192d Support Group commander.

He asks VaANG members to use the following sources for inclement weather base closure/adjusted reporting time information:

--- Base Weather Hotline: Dial 804-236-6000, select option 9

--- Computer (Internet) Access: go to www.richmond.com and look under Government Closings

--- Richmond TV Stations: WRIC TV 8, WTVR 6

In addition to Channels 6 and 8, the base is working to get the information broadcast on Richmond Ch. 12 as well as channels in the Va. Beach/Hampton area.

--- Radio Stations: WRVA 1140 on your AM dial
