Salute from Seven Pines

Pupils, parents, teachers and administrators at Seven Pines Elementary School turned out to salute passing Guardsmen early on the morning of the Saturday UTA in October. They also made about 1,000 bags of cookies to be distributed on base. At right, Elissa Abruzzese (left) and Jessica Morgan show how they feel about the Air Guard.

Call-up

Our first in 40 years

The 192nd Fighter Wing base is looking more and more like an active-duty Air Force base as the wing enters its third month on a wartime footing.

Signs of mobilization are everywhere:

-- Jersey barriers slow vehicles as they approach the front gate;

-- a Survival Recovery Center (SRC) in wing headquarters operates round-the-clock;

-- flying operations are conducted 24 hours a day;

-- chaplains are available throughout the week, often both during the day and during later work shifts;

-- the dining hall serves four meals a day;

THE RIGHT TIME TO GIVE THANKS

One of our rich traditions as Americans is to set aside part of November for the purpose of giving thanks.

Whether you believe that the first Thanksgiving was held by Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts or at Berkeley Plantation in Virginia, the custom unquestionably goes back nearly four centuries.

This year we have special reasons to pause and give thanks. The events of the past year have wrenched our guts and tugged at our heartstrings. We wondered if any loss could be greater than the deaths of 21 Guardsmen – 18 of them from the 203rd Red Horse in Virginia Beach – on March 3.

Then came the horrors of Sept. 11 – a date few of us will ever forget. The death toll this time exceeded 5,000, and the attacks themselves have had an incalculable impact on many of us and our loved ones.

We grieve for those whose lives were taken, and our hearts go out to their families and friends. But through these great losses we seem to have recaptured a national sense of unity, a sense of patriotism unseen since World War II.

With this in mind I offer thanks for some of the blessings that have come into my life:

-- For the men and women of the 192nd Fighter Wing, many of whom have been pulled away from their families and civilian jobs to answer their country's call.

-- For the sacrifices made by their families, who must rearrange their lives to support the mission at hand.

-- For a tremendous outpouring of community support, embodied by the emotion-charged turnout of flag-waving, cheering students and parents in front of Seven Pines Elementary School as we arrived early Saturday for the October drill weekend.

-- For the winning attitude that enabled the 192nd Medical Squadron to overcome previous obstacles and score its highest rating ever in September's Air Force Health Services Inspection.

-- For our nation's leaders, who face decisions of life-and-death importance on a daily basis.

-- For the fighter pilots who risk their lives daily to defend our skies, and for the tireless corps of maintenance and support troops who maintain, fuel and service our aircraft and equipment, and care for the needs of our people.

-- And, on a personal note, for the love and understanding of my own wife, son and daughter, who stand as constant reminders to me of the values and freedoms we are fighting to defend.

At this time of thanksgiving, I've never been more thankful – or honored – to wear the uniform of the United States of America and to serve with the men and women of the Virginia Air National Guard. May God bless you all.

SMSgt. Larry E. Wylie gives the hand of his daughter, Tara, to SRA. Cody Ratcliff of the 192d Civil Engineer Squadron.

All in the family: Guardsman weds Guardsman's daughter

The 192nd Fighter Wing considers itself one big family. In the base chapel last month, it looked like one.

At noon on Sept. 17, a Guardsman, SRA Cody Ratcliff of the 192nd Civil Engineer Squadron, married Tara Nicole Wylie, the daughter of a Guardsman and a base civilian employee.

Ratcliff, 23, of Glen Allen, was called up recently as one of more than 200 members of the 192FW to be activated for a year as part of Operation Noble Eagle.

The bride is the daughter of SMSgt. Larry E. Wylie of the 192nd Security Forces Squadron and Judy Wylie, who works for the 192nd Support Group.

The setting was appropriate for the chapel's first wedding since the post-

Sept. 11 call-ups. The groom wore his dress blues, the bride wore a dark, floor-length suit, and her father wore his battle-dress uniform.

One of the 192nd's chaplains, Capt. David W. Kelley, officiated. Until he went on active duty this past summer, Capt. Kelley was pastor of Heartland Community Church in Chester.

The bride and groom met about seven years ago when they were teen-agers working at the Blue Marlin, a local restaurant. She was a waitress; he was a cook.

For Larry Wylie, gaining a son-in-law from another squadron binds the Air Guard family even more tightly.

"I told [the groom]," Wylie said, "that he's got to call me Sergeant Dad today."

Don't Lose The Wonder

Don't lose your awareness of the mystery of life or the beauty of being alive. We all know that it can be so tempting to just fall into the rut of checking things off our daily lists and going to bed, only to wake up the next day and start all over.

There is more to life than that!

God has placed beautiful things in the world for you to see on your way to work. Open your eyes to see them. God has given you moments in every day to notice the goodness that is still in humanity. Notice them.

Most importantly, He has given us a will to choose the wonder of daily living over the despair of daily dying. Choose the wonder.

If you have fallen asleep to what's around you, it's time to let God wake you up to His celebration called life.

May God's face shine upon the members and families of the Virginia Air National Guard!

Ground broken for 203d memorial

The 203d RED HORSE Flight broke ground on Saturday, Sept. 15, on a memorial to honor the lives of their 18 fallen brothers and three Florida Army National Guard air crew members who perished in an aircraft accident on March 3, 2001.

The C-23 Sherpa Army Guard transport crashed in southern Georgia as the 18 Virginia Air National Guard civil engineers, based at Camp Pendleton, Virginia Beach, were being brought home after completing a two-week annual field training at Hurlburt Field, Fla.

The 200-strong civil engineering unit, their families and families of the men who lost their lives in the aircraft crash participated in the invitation-only ceremony along with a number of military and civilian leaders. Invitations were restricted because of increased security constraints due to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks against the nation.

Senior leaders acknowledged the tragic events of Sept. 11 as they also honored the courage and sacrifices of the National Guard's fallen members and recognized the grief of family members, the unit and the larger U.S. military community.

"The price of freedom is never cheap, and often it is unbearably high," remarked state Sen. Ken Stolle before reading the General Assembly's resolution honoring the fallen Guardsmen.

Maj. Gen. Claude A. Williams, adjutant general of the Virginia National Guard, looked into the faces of family members and said, "We understand the grief of so many Americans who have lost loved ones

Staff Sgt. Audra Collins, 203d RHF information manager, shows the memorial plan to Virginia's Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. Claude Williams, after the groundbreaking ceremony on Sept. 15.

this week. We are very much engaged in the nation's response to this week's attack against our nation. We are prepared to do any work our nation asks of us; we are ready. And even though our mission is to look to the future, we will never forget those we've lost in our RED HORSE unit."

Lt. Col. Thomas Turlip, 203d commander, spoke to those gathered: "Behind me you see a barren field, just a simple parade field that stands as a symbol of our Camp Pendleton. But if you listen closely to the silence, you hear the voices and sounds of many generations of American heroes.

"These are the voices of generations of Americans, members of our Armed Forces that came here to train to defend our nation and protect freedom around the world during past wars and conflicts. You can hear in the wind the sounds of these soldiers training and sharing a fellowship and dedication that only members of the Armed Forces can share. This quiet field is, in a way, a silent place of honor in its own right."

The memorial will include a path wandering through 21 trees, one for each of the men who died in the crash. Inside the path will be a waterfall and pond flanked by a bronze Minuteman statue, a statue of a horse kneeling in front of a granite monument bearing all 21 names, and a number of other bronze plaques.

The unit needs to raise approximately $50,000 to purchase the plaques, statuary and monument. Contributions to the memorial fund may be made out to: 203d RED HORSE Memorial Fund, and sent to MSgt. Keith James, P.O. Box 180, Virginia Beach, VA 23458-0180; phone (757) 437-4680. For more information, write to MSgt. James at P.O. Box 180, Virginia Beach, VA 23458-0180, or call (757) 437-4680.

ALS looking for a few good instructors

Would you like to make a difference with the senior airmen who will someday be the leaders of our unit? One way to do that is to become an Airman Leadership School (ALS) instructor.

Virginia will be offering ALS again from July 8-Aug. 8, 2002.

"We have several excellent instructors but are always looking for more," said MSgt. Roberta Canez-Jenkins, the ALS flight chief. "Being a professional military education (PME) instructor is very fulfilling and greatly enhances your military career."

To be eligible to attend the two-week instructor course, you must have attended any in-residence PME course, and have at least an associate's degree, one year's retainability and the recommendation of your unit commander.

The next instructor course will be held April 15-26 at McGhee Tyson ANG Base, Knoxville, Tenn. Graduates can instruct at any ALS across the country. You do not have to teach for the entire five-week school, but at least a two-week commitment is preferred.

"Virginia graduated its first ALS students this past summer and is looking forward to offering this dynamic program again," Canez-Jenkins said.

For details, contact Canez-Jenkins at Ext. 7950 or ALSIVA1@aol.com.

Some theme parks offer military free entry

Members of the National Guard and Reserve are included in a special offer — free admission to any of four Anheuser-Busch theme parks for the rest of this year.

Anheuser-Busch is making the offer to law enforcement officers, firefighters, medical workers, and members of the U.S. Armed Forces, including Guardsmen and Reservists.

Sea World-Orlando, Sea World-San Diego and Busch Gardens-Tampa are open daily. Sea World-San Antonio is open weekends through Nov. 25. Busch Gardens-Williamsburg was included but closed the last weekend in October.

Guard members need to show their military I.D. Members of their immediate family (mother, father, spouse or significant other, and children) will be admitted free on the first visit and will receive a 25 percent discount for visits through Dec. 31.

For details, call 1-800-DIAL-BUD.

Golden Corral sets night for military

On the evening of Veterans Day, Nov. 12, Golden Corral restaurants nationwide will be offering a buffet dinner free of charge to veterans and active duty military personnel.

"We are not requiring IDs or uniforms for veterans and active-duty military," a Golden Corral spokesman said. "All that is necessary is that they identify themselves at the register when they come through the line."

Golden Corral is partnering its fund-raising efforts with the national Disabled American Veterans (DAV).

"We salute Golden Corral for opening its doors to veterans and active-duty military, and for partnering with DAV in the first Military Appreciation Night," said Arthur H. Wilson, the DAV's national adjutant.

TB tests needed for deployments

Members of the Armed Forces who deploy outside of the continental United States are required to have a tuberculosis (TB) screening performed both before and after deployments.

This screening is done to identify infected personnel.

The Mantoux tuberculin skin test is performed with an injection just below the surface of the skin. The reaction must be read by a trained health care worker (MD, DO, RN, LPN, military public health technician, or military immunizations technician) 48 to 72 hours after injection.

Most health departments will read the test for free. The results must be returned to the 192nd Public Health Office within seven days. They can be faxed to 804-236-6143 (attention TSgt. Jason Yetter).

CMSgt. David J. Kinsey, 192d FW

CMSgt. David J. Kinsey likes to stay on the run, and his new job will keep him that way.

Kinsey took over as the 192nd Fighter Wing's command chief master sergeant in mid-September, just as the Virginia Air Guard was mobilizing in response to the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

"As soon as I heard that a second plane had smashed into the World Trade Center, I knew it was a potential terrorist act," he said, "and that our military responsibilities were suddenly elevated. I think anybody in the military who knew what was going on probably had similar thoughts."

The base soon moved to a round-the-clock flying schedule and over the next few days activated dozens of Guard members. Emotions were running high. No one knew whether another attack was coming, how the United States would respond or what the 192nd would be called to do.

Kinsey found himself concerned not only about his family at home but about the entire cadre of enlisted troops in the 192FW and the multitude of issues they would face. That's his job – to know the enlisted force and to feel what they feel.

"If they're concerned about when and what they'll get paid, I need to make that my concern," Kinsey said. "If they're concerned about the information they need to make a decision whether to stay with their current health care provider, I need to make that my concern."

Kinsey, who turns 47 this month, was selected from among candidates to succeed CMSgt. Wayne Keene, who recently retired as the wing's command chief master sergeant.

MSgt. Steve Gamache, who succeeded Kinsey as chief of weather station operations for the 200th Weather Flight, said the wing couldn't have made a better choice.

"He was the guy" who made things run at the 200th, Gamache said.

Kinsey spent two years in the Army in 1983-85 and then 16 years in the Virginia Air National Guard, almost all of that time in the weather flight. He had been station chief for the past 10 years.

"He was instrumental in developing an excellent working relationship with the 29th Infantry Division," Gamache said. The 200th's main mission is to support the 29th Infantry.

In addition, Kinsey developed a program in which weather flight meteorologists taught the elements of the weather merit badge to more than 1,200 Boy Scouts at the National Boy Scout Jamboree in 1997 and 2001 at Fort A.P. Hill in Caroline County.

He also "managed to go TDY a zillion times," Gamache added, including a two-month deployment to Bolivia with the 2/224th Aviation Battalion, the Army Guard's helicopter unit stationed at the south end of the runway. "He was their sole weather support."

"He has also deployed on AEF (Aerospace Expeditionary Forces) deployments to Turkey and Saudi," Gamache added.

Kinsey said those deployments were made possible by an understanding employer (the Commonwealth of Virginia) and the support of people such as Gamache, MSgt. Valeria Murphy and Capt. Tony Schlagel.

Kinsey has developed a reputation for staying cool under pressure and for staying busy.

In the 16 years since he joined the Air Guard, he has helped rear two children, served for six years as a Cub Scout and Boy Scout leader, earned an Air Force degree in weather, a bachelor's degree in earth

CMSgt. Robert Barnette, VaANG

CMSgt. Robert N. Barnette, Jr., recently became the Virginia Air National Guard State Headquarters command chief master sergeant. Prior to accepting his current position, Barnette had served as the 192d Fighter Wing human resource adviser.

As the VaANG State Headquarters command chief, he serves as adviser to the adjutant general of Virginia and the deputy adjutant general for air on quality-of-life issues and concerns of the enlisted corps. Barnette is the 10th Guardsman, and the first African American, to hold this position within the Virginia Air National Guard.

Barnette encourages enlisted members to take hold of their careers and be prepared for opportunities. "Keep your options open," he advises. "Always do your best to have yourself ready; you never know when an opportunity may present itself. If you have completed the appropriate level of job training and have finished the highest level of professional military education that is available to you, you are ready to act when an opportunity presents itself."

Barnette was born in the town of Chase City in Mecklenburg County, Va. He graduated from Bluestone Senior High School in Clarksville in June 1970 and entered the U.S. Air Force in March 1971. He was released from active duty in August 1974 and transferred to the Air Force Reserve. He joined the (then) 192d Tactical Fighter Group, VaANG, in January 1977.

Barnette's background is in fire protection and human resource force management. His military assignments included tours in Thailand, New Hampshire and Louisiana. He also served in Operation Desert Storm. Prior to his assignment as the 192d Fighter Wing human resource adviser, he served as the 192d Support Group first sergeant.

In his civilian job, Barnette is a safety manager with E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., Tyvek® NonWovens business (Spurance Plant) in Richmond. He is married to the former Janice Holloway and they reside in Mechanicsville.

He has a bachelor's degree in public safety from Virginia Commonwealth University. He has earned numerous military awards and decorations, including the Meritorious Service Medal, National Defense Service Medal and the Vietnam Service Medal.

Barnette may be reached at Ext. 6510 during drills and by e-mail at (robert.barnette@varich.ang.af.mil).

and atmospheric science and a master's degree in business administration; completed 28 marathons and four ultra-marathons; run on the Virginia National Guard marathon team and the national "All Guard" marathon team; been a key player in organizing the SunTrust Richmond Marathon; been race director for the Ukrop's Monument Avenue 10K; and, oh, yes, held down a full-time job with the Commonwealth of Virginia.

In September, in addition to starting the command chief job in the Air Guard, Kinsey moved into a new position in civilian life, as environmental manager with the Virginia Office of Environmental Education at the Department of Environmental Quality.

He also competed in his fourth triathlon of the summer – the Odyssey Half-Ironman Triathlon at Lake Anna (a mile-and-a-quarter swim, 56-mile bike ride and 13.1 mile run.)

He placed first in his age group. But, then, what would you expect?

Active Duty: 192d operates on wartime footing

-- the fire department is adding beds and lockers to cope with additional staffing.

-- temporary housing has been set up for pilots on duty for combat air patrol missions.

"The pilots are flying 24 hours a day, and the unit is jumping through hoops to keep them flying," said Lt. Col. Rick Turner, the wing's executive officer. "It's a tremendous challenge."

This is the first time since the unit was activated for the Berlin Crisis in 1961-62 that the base has reached this level of sustained activity. For that crisis, the entire unit was called up and based here for slightly over 10 months.

The Virginia Air Guard was also called to active duty in March 1951 for the Korean War. It spent most of the next 21 months at Turner AFB, Albany, Ga., and then Godman AFB, Fort Knox, Ky.

Operation Noble Eagle -- part of the U.S. military response to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon -- has brought about a number of changes for 192nd personnel and their families.

Tightened security is perhaps the most obvious. Guards at the front gate require anyone entering the base to show an ID card. Identification is also required before entering most base facilities. Some buildings also have sign-in/sign-out procedures in force.

Vehicles are prohibited from parking near the aircraft parking apron and near most buildings.

Several people have asked how long the intensified security measures will be in effect, Turner said.

"We at the 192nd don't determine the Threatcon level," he said. That ruling comes from higher headquarters. However, "We are constantly monitoring the situation. If allowed to, we will lower it."

More than 250 members of the 192nd have been activated for periods up to a year. This has created the need for additional services. Between Sept. 11 and Oct. 22, the Legal Office updated or prepared more than 100 wills. The finance section continues to handle about 1,300 payroll transactions a day. Base personnel specialists worked 12-to-14-hour days, seven days a week to handle the increased workload in the first five weeks after Sept. 11. Part of that time was spent preparing and conducting briefings for activated airmen and their dependents.

The largest single question posed to the Military Personnel Flight concerns the Tri-Care health insurance plan, said Lt. Col. Michael Woody, the base's director of personnel.

"[Activated personnel] want to know, 'Should I be keeping my civilian insurance?' " Woody said. "We tell them, yes, if you can financially afford to do so."

Base officials are keenly aware of the many effects a mobilization of this type can have on families, from reduced income to extended periods of separation.

"We are in the process of hiring a family support and readiness contract person to tackle additional family issues," Turner said. The family support specialist should be on board by the end of the year, he said.

In the meantime, he said, any family concerns that arise can

Watershed work visible near base

With leaves falling from the trees, you'll be able to view earth-moving work taking place on the airport's new watershed the next time you drive to the Sandston Air Guard base. As you near the base (driving down Beulah Road from Seven Pines) you may notice large amounts of fresh dirt on your left.

Last year, work began on a new stormwater management facility to handle run-off from airport property. The project involves the design and development of shallow wetlands for treatment of storm water. It is designed to improve the water quality of local watersheds.

Heritage Banquet

The Heritage Banquet Committee will meet Sunday, Nov. 4 at 2 p.m. in the vehicle maintenance meeting room. All interested personnel are welcome. The Heritage Banquet will be held March 9, 2002. Tickets will be on sale soon! For details, call TSgt. Floyd Brown at ext. 6469.

RED HORSE T-Shirts

The 203d RED HORSE Flight doesn't have 203d Remembrance T-shirts available at this time, according to MSgt. Bob Laws, 203d RHF.

However, anyone interested in ordering one may contact Laws: robert.laws@varich.ang.af.mil or (757) 864-6125, or ext. 95-661 if dialed from the Sandston Guard base. The black T-shirts memorialize the 18 203d RED HORSEMEN who died in an airplane crash as they were returning home from their annual field training at Hurlburt Field, Fla., on March 3, 2001.

ChalleNGe Prom

The next ChalleNGe prom party will be at 7 p.m. Dec. 15 at the State Military Reservation in Virginia Beach. The Virginia Air National Guard hosts the party twice each year (December and June) for the graduating classes.

Anyone or any duty section interested in helping with the December party is invited to attend the planning meeting at the VaANG State Headquarters on Sunday, Nov. 4 at 3 p.m. For details, call 1Lt. Toni Vanderspiegel at ext. 6012.

Clinic offering flu shots now

Flu shots are currently being given at the Guard base during the week. All Guard members who haven't received them by the November drill will be able to get them then.

Anyone needing normal shots (other than flu and yellow fever) may visit the 192d Medical Squadron on Mondays, Wednesdays or Fridays from 9-10 a.m. Flu shots will be given Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9-10 a.m. at the Shot Clinic (the former Disaster Preparedness training building between Wing Headquarters and the Dining Facility). Anyone requiring yellow fever inoculations may get them at the Shot Clinic on Wednesdays from 9-10 a.m.

Flu shots will be given during the November drill weekend using the schedule printed below:

Saturday

9-10 a.m.: AGS, Support Group.

10-11:30 a.m.: Maintenance Sq.

1-2 p.m.: Logistics Sq., CES, Logistics Support, State Headquarters.

2-3 p.m.: 149th FS, Comm. Flt., Security Forces Sq., Services, 200th Weather Flt.

3-4 p.m.: Mission Support, Operations Gp., Operations Support, Fighter Wing.

Sunday

8-9 a.m.: AGS, Support Gp

9-10:30 a.m.: Maintenance Sq.

10:30-11:30 a.m.: Logistics Sq., CES, Logistics Support, State Headquarters.

1-2 p.m.: 149th FS, Comm. Flt., Security Forces Sq., 200th Weather Flt.

2-3 p.m.: Mission Support, Operations Gp., Operations Support, Fighter Wing.

Always bring your shot record with you when getting any inoculations, the Shot Clinic staff says. Questions may be referred to SMSgt. Kim Evans or SMSgt. Andrea Richardson, ext. 6307.

Combat Archer is 'real world'

During the last half of July, nearly 90 Wing members deployed to Tyndall AFB, Fla., to participate in live-weapons-fire training at Combat Archer. The contingent consisted of pilots, aircraft maintenance and weapons personnel and a small support staff, according to SMSgt. Kenny "Fuzzy" Whitlock, weapons supervisor.

"Combat Archer provides great training for the pilots," he said, "but it's also very worthwhile for the load crews because it gives them real-world experience hanging missiles, having weapons systems fire, cleaning the launchers, and resetting the equipment. The deployment marked the first live-fire scenario for several members of our weapons crew."

All aspects of the mission went superbly, Whitlock said, with aircraft systems, launchers and missiles performing nearly flawlessly.

"Teamwork and precision are critical to success," he said.

This Year's Thanksgiving Dinner -- Twice as Delicious

The 192nd Services Flight dining facility will offer traditional Thanksgiving meals twice during for the month of November.

The drill-weekend Thanksgiving meal – roasted turkey and all the trimmings – will be served on Sunday, Nov. 4.

Then, on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 22, the dining hall will again offer the traditional turkey dinner – this time for unit members and their families. Those planning to attend the Thanksgiving Day meal are asked to let the Services Flight know by Nov. 16 how many family members they plan to bring. Call 236-6115 or 236-6109.

Dining Hall hours for both meals will be 1100-1300.
